Book Review: Notes from an Exhibition by Patrick Gale ...

The novel Notes from an Exhibition by Patrick Gale tells the story of Rachel, a successful artist with bipolar disorder who lives and works in Cornwall with her husband Antony. Her condition profoundly affected her art and family relationships and each chapter focusses on a different member of the family and the story is told not in a chronological way but very haphazardly as if to emphasise Rachel's condition.

Another brilliant book from Patrick Gale. All the elements we have come to expect - fantastic characterisation, insightful study of family dynamics, several points of view, twists and turns along the way. The idea of beginning each chapter with a note from an exhibition seems like the kind of thing I wouldn't like, but it was great actually.
